

.geek.nz Submission

From: Edward Yardley
Received: 02 April 2003

I totally support the creation of geek.nz for these reasons:

1. The people who control dns servers/routers/web servers/mta's and even the New Zealand domain name system can all be considered (and many do) as geeks, to name just a few. Seeing it is this group who put so much time and effort into this area, creating a better New Zealand Internet system and even Worldwide I see it fit to give them something in return.
2. In agreeance with Gavin Lambert's submission - This would do no harm to anyone, It would improve revenue for registrars and give geeks a place of their own for personal sites, weblogs and portfolio's.
3. Sure, this may not be a common practice Worldwide to allow second level domains of this nature. There is no reason to stop it being a first, this helps set New Zealand aside from the rest of the world in Internet technologies and gives our country Uniqueness!

Yours Sincerely
Edward Yardley
